LONG BIO

Cece is the pen name of Sarah Araide, a poet and mechanical engineering student at the Technion. She was born in Maghar and discovered writing at the age of seven, turning it into a way of understanding herself and the world around her.

Her poetry carries both softness and fire. She writes about pain, love, grief, identity and survival, and about the complicated act of returning to oneself. Poetry is where she gives shape to what cannot be solved by logic alone. Cece Once Said is her first collection.

INTERVIEWS

Cece is available for interviews in Arabic, Hebrew and English.
